

Discover your unique engagement style with our 'Personality Test'

In the context of Citizen Science, public engagement often involves individuals with different personalities and preferences for participation. Fill out our Personality test and get to know which participatory method suits you best.

What excites you the most about Public Engagement projects?

- a) Discovering new things in the world around you
- b) Preserving and exploring historical or cultural aspects
- c) Leveraging technology for a greater purpose
- d) Collaborating with others and building a sense of community

Which word resonates with you the most?

- a) Curiosity
- b) History and Culture
- c) Technology
- d) Community

What is your preferred learning style?

- a) Hands-on experiences and fieldwork
- b) Reading and studying historical texts
- c) Online courses and digital resources
- d) Group discussions and interactive sessions

What social or environmental cause are you most passionate about?

- a) Nature conservation and environmental issues
- b) Historic preservation and cultural heritage
- c) Technological benefit
- d) Community building and social impact

When contributing to a project, what aspect brings you the most satisfaction?

- a) Exploration and new discoveries
- b) Using and sharing cultural knowledge
- c) Technological innovation and data-driven insights
- d) Building connections and a sense of belonging

Results:

If you chose mostly:

A's

you align with an Explorer Engagement Personality

Embark on a Sherlock-style quest for new discoveries, fuelled by curiosity and a passion for exploring the world around you. Engage with your audience by setting up fun explorations, hands-on workshops, and interactive experiences. Invite the public to join you on a cool adventure as you unravel the wonders of the world together—it's like being the Sherlock Holmes of Citizen Science, but with a playful twist!

B's

you align with a Cultural Preservation Personality

Your love for history and culture is so vast that you might be the only one who knows the real story behind that ancient relic in your grandma's attic. You're not just preserving artefacts; you're the guardian of stories that whisper through the ages. Engage with your audience through storytelling sessions and memory institution collaborations. Invite the public to join you in unravelling the mysteries of the past for the future generations.

C's

you align with a Tech-Savvy Engagement Personality

You're all about leveraging technology for a greater purpose, embracing innovation, and contributing to data-driven insights. Your relationship with gadgets is so advanced that even Siri asks for your advice. Your knack for embracing technology isn't just a lifestyle; it's a digital revolution in the context of Citizen Science. Engage with your audience through online platforms and interactive digital projects.

D's

you align with a Community Builder Engagement Personality

You thrive on building connections and creating such a strong community vibe that your neighbourhood feels like a close-knit family. You find satisfaction in building new contacts and fostering a sense of belonging, making a positive social impact through collaborative efforts. Connect with your audience by organizing enjoyable community events, collaborating on projects, and hosting interactive workshops. Encourage everyone to join in, fostering a sense of togetherness and a shared purpose.